Blessed are they who hope in the Lord.

-Ps. 40,5.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

This Sunday gives us the opportunity to hear St. Luke's record of the Beatitudes. The Beatitudes are a true staple of Christian thought, though often overlooked in favor of other aspects of the New Testament. From a rhetorical perspective, they are a renewal of the proclamation of the Ten Commandments and an necessary part of Christ's mission in making clear that the fulfillment of the Law and promise of God is at hand in the goodness of the God who is among us and empowering our good actions in the world.

At the same time, they are an inspiration to us who look to goodness in our daily lives and are able to channel the grace of the Holy Spirit to all those who need our assistance, kindness, counsel, and any other reflection or imitation of God's presence.

While Christ uses the Beatitudes to explain that being "blessed" is a possibility for all of us, let us remember that St. John the Baptist's father, Zechariah was the first of the New Testament wise men who exclaimed "Blessed be the Lord our God..." (Luke 1,68). Holy Scripture thus teaches us that in being blessed, our conduct not only reflects God's will for goodness but also our closeness to him.

Let us use the Mass this Sunday to tether ourselves to the Lord in prayer and good action as we go forth in confidence.

May God bless you,
