“I will praise you Lord, in the assembly of your people.”
-Ps. 22,26.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

As we proceed through the center of the Easter season, contemplation of the reality, beauty, and effects of the Resurrection of Christ should deepen of understanding of the faith and also increase our belief. St. Leo the Great, as always, offers a decent meditation:

For the Son of God is true God, having from the Father all that the Father is, with no beginning in time, subject to no sort of change, undivided from the One God, not different from the Almighty, the eternal Only-begotten of the eternal Father; so that the faithful intellect believing in the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost in the same essence of the one Godhead, neither divides the Unity by suggesting degrees of dignity, nor confounds the Trinity by merging the Persons in one. But it is not enough to know the Son of God in the Father's nature only, unless we acknowledge Him in what is ours without withdrawal of what is His own. For that self-emptying, which He underwent for man's restoration, was the dispensation of compassion, not the loss of power. For, though by the eternal purpose of God there was “no other name under heaven given to men whereby they must be saved,” the Invisible made His substance visible. the Intemporal temporal, the Impassible passible: not that power might sink into weakness, but that weakness might pass into indestructible power. (Sermon LXVIII,IV.)

In this spirit, let us confidently commit ourselves to prayerful contemplation. Contemplation of the faith attaches us to that joy we reference during the Easter season and the rewards are great along the way of our journey of salvation.

May God bless you,
